Maysville Wins In a Walk From the Cincinnati All Stars—Game Was a Regular Swatfest.

The Maysville boys easily put it on the Cincinnati All Stars in a five inning contest by the score of 17 to 0.

A heavy rain fell for about fifteen minutes before the game started, and made the grounds quite soggy, thus making the contest a cross between a slugging bee and a combination of mudlarks.

The feature of the game was the running catch by Manager Chapman in left field and the all around playing of the Maysville team.

The score follows:
Innings ..... 1 2 3 4 5 — R H E
All Stars ..... 0 0 0 0 0 — 0 1 3
Maysville ..... 1 0 6 4 6 — 17 17 1

HERE'S A GENTLE TIP TO TOBACCO GROWERS.

It is claimed by many experienced tobacco men that loose leaf tobacco warehouses will do more to control the acreage than any other method or argument. The reason is plain. Tobacco is supposed to sell for its actual value on the loose leaf floor. Good tobacco brings good prices, and the weed that is poor in quality is almost certain to bring the grower a poor price. As soon as the growers realize that they can not longer depend on the extra fine crops of neighbors to boost the price of their poor crops, they, too, will pay more attention to quality and less attention to quantity, with the result that an average crop will be grown, the buyer will be better satisfied and the grower will realize a higher price than he has ever before received.—Owensboro Messenger.

THE PSYCHOLOGICAL MOMENT.

It was just like Wilson, who once taught psychology and political economy, to get insulted at Huerta just at the right time to capture enough field guns to equip a dozen batteries, and then prove by the written book that Mexico and the United States are not at war.

Who is behind Huerta with money and encouragement, we know not. Maybe there is nobody. Whether he deliberately sought to embroil this country in a war to circumvent the triumphant Rebels to the north of Mexico City by rallying national sentiment to his support in the face of an alien foe, or whether like ourselves he is somewhat the creature of circumstances in this affair, is equally a subject of conjecture only.

Of one thing we are certain, Mr. Wilson has exhibited statesmanlike poise. While his trusted agents were in Mexico acquiring facts, which are the only raw material Mr. Wilson ever uses in his mental processes, he has cleared the situation of all possible foreign complications. While refusing to recognize the claims of the monster, Huerta, he has attempted, with what success we know not, to counteract in a war to circumvent the triumphant Rebels the Constitutionalists that we seek nothing further than to lend a neighborly hand where most sorely needed; and now that the crisis has come, we find him striking squarely a blow that will cripple the defense of Huerta, if the worst comes, and convince the people of Mexico that the smiling face of Uncle Sam is neither guileless nor the sign of a flabby muscular system.

Technically it is a peculiar situation we are in. We are not fighting Mexico—at least, we think we are not. We are going after Huerta; but if Huerta turns out to be Mexico after all, why, then we are in for a fight. If some kindly intervention of providence should suddenly eliminate Huerta before events press further toward their fulfillment from Vera Cruz to the Capital there might be an end to the situation that developed almost before our astonishment and perplexity over conditions had a chance to give way to indignation at a national affront.

We would be on hand to see a new administration started with the proper understanding in Mexico in that event; and it is a thing to be desired; for never has a nation more reluctantly nor seemingly more inevitably been drawn into a conflict.—State Journal.

Recalling that Senator Foraker once told his Republican brethren that the reason he sulked within his tepee was a desire to be in position to gather up the pieces after the wreck. This was taken that he meant to be the patron saint, who would rebuild the grand old machine. But, here he is making away the fifth wheel, which in this instance is the senatorial honors.—Georgetown (O.) News-Democrat.

FINANCE AND POETRY.

The better class of banks have come to realize the benefits of intelligent advertising, but, so far as observed, a bank in Atchison, Kans., is the first to use limericks for this purpose. One of its ads last week was this: "There was a young man who raved, because he no money had saved. When asked why he grieved, he frowned and looked peeved, and said, 'I wish I had thought and behaved.'"

COXEY OUT OF DATE.

General Coxe can't make it go again. Manners and men have been changing rapidly, and when the General climbed into the old phaeton, clucked to the old mule, and started out of Massillon, Ohio, bound for Washington with his army, he was bound to fail. The General is an anachronistic as "Ta-ra-boom-de-ay." He was of and for other times, and when the army reached Canton he had only 20 followers. They were hunting for sandwiches.

A younger crew with improved methods are as sailing and rebuking society—Tannenbaum and "Dirty John" Wengrove in New York, singing "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum," and behaving as such.

Even Ben Reitman and Emma Goldman have to go West to wake up the animals. The East yawns at them. "Mother" Jones was hardly heard of in the West Virginia strike. She had to go to Colorado to have her "rights" invaded and her civil liberty denied.

The East is becoming persuaded that talk is talk and that it does not begin to do harm until officialdom tries to stop it. The English found this out years ago. If an Englishman has anything on his mind he may go to Trafalgar Square and be as violent as his vocabulary will permit him. Generally, all the police do is to keep other violent friends of man hitting him with a brick.

Coxey, by hopelessly obsolete methods, is trying what even the imaginative and energetic I. W. W. leaders are finding it increasingly difficult to do in New York, even by adopting the most modern methods of assailing and reproaching society.

Coxey is a misled old man. He'd better turn the old mule around and drive home.

THE DAILY NOVELETTE.

What You Preach.
He lectured on peace;
He lectured on war,
But when he got home;
Enough said—and more.

The great auditorium was packed to the doors. A dozen more people and it would have been packed to the windows. This, gentle reader, will give you some idea of the size of the audience.

For Hiram Z. Grigglesby, world renowned advocate of international and domestic peace, was a famous man.

"And in conclusion, dear brothers and sisters," ended Mr. Grigglesby, "let me say that the millennium will not dawn until peace rules the world, until every man loves his neighbor as a brother, until women forget to quarrel, until every dog has his day and lets the cats alone."

Amidst tumultuous cheering and the throwing of programs the famous peace advocate backed off the platform and wound his way home. On the front doorstep his seven-year-old son, Brittlebeane, was sitting.

"What!" cried Grigglesby, "dirty hands against Take that! and that! and that! not to speak of that!" And with each "that" he struck the innocent child on his forehead with a cobblestone which he carried for the purpose, hurting his feelings dreadfully.

Then stalking into the house, he threw his wife down the cellar stairs for daring to have steak for supper without consulting him and severely spanked his eighteen-year-old daughter, Gladwyn, because he thought her new hat was immodest. Then, hastily bolting his supper, he took the 7:59 train for Glucksville to deliver a lecture on, "All Kinds of Peace and Why."—Louisville Times.

OLD PEOPLE GAIN

Strength by Taking Vinol.—Here is Proof.

So many cases like this are constantly coming to our attention that we publish it for the benefit of others.—Mr. John Wansley of Jackson, Mich., says: "I am nearly 70 years of age, and was in a feeble condition but Vinol has done wonders for me. It is the best medicine to create strength I have ever seen and I have taken a good many of them. Last spring I was run down and worn out but I took Vinol and soon regained my strength. Vinol is certainly an invigorating tonic for old people."

It is the medicinal curative elements of the cod livers without oil aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron which are contained in Vinol that makes it so efficient in such cases.

If you have an aged father, mother or anyone in your family who needs a strength-creating tonic, try Vinol on our offer to give back your money if it fails to benefit. J. C. Pecor, Druggist, Maysville.

P. S.—Port itching, burning skin try our Saxo Salve. We guarantee it.

There are still some cases of small pox in the hill country between the L. N. R. R. and Fleming creek but we are told the health authorities are in the situation well in hand and hope to prevent further spread. Samuel Woods, Sr., one of the oldest men in Bracken County, was taken seriously ill Saturday night at his home on Chappell avenue, since which time he has been in a stupor, gradually growing weaker. Mr. Woods is a veteran of the Civil War and was 91 years of age December 25, last.

TO REDUCE ILLITERACY
Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs Endorses Work of Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart.

The Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs was urged to redouble its energies in its fight against illiteracy by Miss Hazell Cornell, of Louisville, who presented a report on education at the annual convention being held at The Seelbach, Louisville.
Kentucky stands thirty-seventh among the States in literacy, she declared, but educational workers aim to put the State in third place by the next Government census six years hence.
"Education is the greatest defense of man," said Miss Cornell. "With it man is master, without it he is a slave. Any attempt to eliminate illiteracy in Kentucky should be welcomed by all. The last Legislature had a consistent policy of neglecting education. The federation is the most powerful body of women in the State. It recognizes the need and through its united efforts can accomplish much."

Work of Mrs. Stewart.
Miss Cornell described the educational campaign carried on through the lectures of Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, which were under the auspices of the federation. She said Mrs. Stewart had spoken at Owensboro, Paducah, Winchester, Danville, Harrodsburg, Georgetown, Lexington, Covington, Paris, Maysville, Richmond and Louisville, and that at every one of the cities steps had been taken through subscriptions and volunteer teachers to blot out illiteracy. The campaign had been a financial success, she stated.
She told of the Educational Committee's efforts to get through the Legislature a bill permitting the use of public school buildings for social center meetings.

AMERICAN IDOLS IN JAPAN.
It is announced that the "Billikin" figures have reached Japan and are actually worshipped as the American God of Good Luck. One prominent man is said to attribute his prosperity to his faith in the "Billikin." It was in Japan, too, that a missionary found a Standard Oil can installed as an object of worship. "Billikin" and the oil can as "graven images" are an ironic commentary on the levity and materialism of our American life, but perhaps they are less depressing than the historic cargo of Medford rum that accompanied the early missionaries to Africa, and the American cigarettes that are being introduced throughout China.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Picturesque Institutions of Gotham Eliminated

NEW YORK.—A picturesque bit of New York life is being eliminated pretty rapidly by that industrious young woman, Mrs. "Katie" Davis, our new commissioner of corrections. She threw up her hands in horror at the hoary old custom she found in our famous hall, proceeded to get a new broom and made a clean sweep. She has even dared to squelch the insidious evil of the woman charity worker, which is still in great vogue at Sing Sing.

Why, it's come to such a pass that it's almost impossible to pass a "shot o' hay" to a friend temporarily detained.

A young woman called to see her husband, accused of petit larceny. She submitted to a search of her person. This has been the rule always, of course, but the Davis search wasn't like the traditional style. Miss Davis' underling went so far that the young woman became very nervous. The searcher became more curious, and especially interested in a pretty little hat pin. It had a long, black, shiny head. And the pin was rudely drawn from the hat. It was hollow, in fact, had once served as the cap of a fountain pen. White cotton was packed inside and the core was a quantity of white powder. "About four grains of morphine," said Dr. Lichtenstein, the Tombs physician. So the young woman was soon occupying a cell near her husband.

The "moribund parties" are a thing of the past, too. These sight-seeing expeditions have become a special joy to New Jersey commuters. In fact, there are rumors that certain railroads have run special excursions that ruralists might be "uplifted" by a vision of some of the famous Tombs residents. A walk over the bridge of sighs brought thrills to the New Jersey heart.

The death knell of the wine champagne affairs indulged in freely by the more wealthy occupants of cells has been sounded, also. No prisoner is allowed to purchase more than 25 cents' worth of food at one time.

Another famous institution has passed in the rude closing up of a Tombs bar. Alas, alas, and once more alas. Here I will shed a real tear. Tombs place was certainly much better than most of the rest in his neighborhood, and there are dark rumors about the genesis of the affair.

But Tom was declared out of order by a city magistrate and sent to the Tombs for 30 days, where he distinguished himself by shoveling more snow out of the courtyard than any other man there, and made himself still more famous by getting a greater amount of work out of the prisoners than any other man since Hendrick Hudson threw the first drunken redskin into a stockade and forced him to roll cigars for the colony. Tom was going to punch any guy who didn't keep his shovel going.

But while Tom added to his laurels in the Tombs his famous $10,000 mahogany bar was going, going, gone for $250.

Conductor Tells of Troubles With Passengers

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—"Yes," said the street car conductor, growing communicative after an altercation with a passenger about a transfer of ancient vintage, "this here job's a chum—you oughta try it. In this business you learn things about folks, you do. For instance, 't'other day a sorry-looking old party wanted to ride free with me because he hadn't the price of a fare and he was too old and sick to walk, but I'd seen him before and I said 'nixie.' I thought the men on the hack platform would put me off, the way they went at me and the company and everybody connected for a soulless hunch, and at last one man tried to make me ashamed by coughing up a nickel. The old man was grateful to him and went in and picked out the choice seat in front where he could put his two feet on the other seat."

"Says I to the nickel giver, 'You think I'm a clear sign for heart, but if you want to get wise just drop off when the venerable gent does and ho a slough. If everything's all right report the next time you ride with me and I'll give you this nickel back.'"

"Well, that got him curious like, and he did it, and some time later I happened to pick him up again, and the first thing he pushed me out a cigar. 'Say, pardner, you were right about that old guy,' he said. 'What did he do but beat it for the nearest booze joint and load up with a good stiff 'un, and then carry off a pint of red juice, and he didn't ask the briskeep to give it to him neither.'"

"A girl one day handed me a transfer. It was punched for the wrong day, the wrong hour and the wrong line, but she crossed her heart and said she'd just got it, so I let it go, 'cause, of course, you can't set a little kid girl out on the curb. At the end of the line I noticed she was having trouble with her mind and she says, 'Say, mister, I wasn't telling you no story about that transfer. I did just get it. I just got it off the pavement. I ain't got a cent now, but I'm going to bring you the nickel I owe you.' 'All right, missy,' I said, and thought no more of it, 'cause folks don't usually fetch nickels when they once get away, but a day or two after that, when I came to the end, there was my girl waiting, all shivered up with cold, and with my nickel tucked in her mitten. Say, I just felt like I wanted to wait for that girl and marry her by and by."

Shooting Follows the Loss of One Cigarette

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—A quarrel over a cigarette resulted in two men being shot and a sixteen-year-old boy charged with the shooting early the other morning. Gust Ewert, eighteen years old, 592 Madison street, was shot in the left breast, the bullet striking directly over the heart.

Albert Schmidt, twenty years old, 560 Sixteenth avenue, received a bullet behind the right ear. Vincent Walsh, sixteen years old, who, according to the police, did the shooting, was held over on a warrant charging him with assault.

After the shooting, which occurred at Ninth and National avenues shortly after three o'clock, Ewert was taken to the residence of Dr. Harry S. Piggin. An examination disclosed that the bullet, which was steel tipped, had lodged half an inch beneath the surface of the skin in the chest wall.

Schmidt's examination at Emergency hospital by Dr. Scheele showed that the bullet had struck the mastoid bone of the skull just behind the left ear. It plowed through the hard shell and into the soft cellular recesses of the bone and thence ran into the ear, from where it was easily extracted.

The story told by the three concerned was identical in that the shooting resulted from the theft of a cigarette from Walsh's mouth.

Ewert, Schmidt and several other young men passed Walsh on the street. One of the two victims snatched Walsh's cigarette from his mouth. The lad drew a revolver from his pocket and fired three times, it is said. Two bullets found marks.

No More "Spooning" Via This Bank's Telephone

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Capt. was blocking the right of way of Mammon, so the doors of the public telephone booths in the National Bank of Commerce were removed. When the bank building was erected special booths were constructed on both sides of the Olive street entrance. They had large glass doors and were sound proof. They were meant for the use of persons who had confidential communications for their financial agents.

Courting couples took possession of the marble-lined, glass-doored, sound-proof booths. Famous financiers, with large interests in stock and bonds, would seek instant communication with their brokers.

They might be on the "hull" side of a falling market. Every moment meant the loss or gain of thousands of dollars.

Vainly the men of Mammon walked nervously up and down the tessellated corridor of the bank, or pounded at the glass doors. Love laughed at bankers away more uproariously than it laughs at locksmiths.

W. B. Cowen, vice-president of the bank, said that no doubt it was true that "love makes the world go round."

"But love clogs the wheels of business," said Mr. Cowen, "so we had to take the doors off the booths."

"Now the boys and girls do not take up much time exchanging soft nothings and a poor banker can get a chance to make himself some money by putting through a deal by phone once in a while."

LAUNCHING OF DREADNAUGHT OKLAHOMA

Uncle Sam's latest giant fighting ship was launched at the yard of the New York Shipbuilding company at Camden, N. J., March 23. Miss Lorena J. Cruce, daughter of the governor of Oklahoma, is shown in the picture just before she sent the dreadnaught down the ways by smashing a bottle of champagne across the bow.

PASSING OF ONE-TIME CHILD-WIFE RECALLS CAREER OF CASSIUS M. CLAY

Strange Marriage of Aristocratic, Fire Eating Southern Abolitionist at Age of Ninety and Dora Richardson, the Thirteen-Year-Old Child of a Poor White Family, a Union That Caused a Siege at Clay Mansion.

Louisville, Ky.—It is more than ten years now since the name of Gen. Cassius M. Clay figured in the day's dispatches from Kentucky. We used to read of him in 1903 as an old man with a hushy white mane in a state of siege at his family mansion near Richmond, Ky., with faithful retainers, armed with guns, defending the besieged house against attacks by process servers and the curious public.

The name is only recalled to mind now by the dispatch the other day announcing the death of Dora Richardson, the erstwhile child wife of the aged warrior and statesman.

It was one of the strangest romances in history, that strange affinity between the old man, the aristocrat, scholar, diplomat and soldier, the scion of one of the proudest lines in America and the little, statured, unkempt girl of a poor white family. He was ninety, she was thirteen. He was old enough to be her great-grandfather, yet he married her.

It was the old man's dream to take the untalented child, accustom her to the ways of culture, educate her, make her a fitting heir for his name and estate. He carried out his part of the plan, but the poor child could never accustom herself to her unusual surroundings. After she tired of the dolls and the other toys he bought her she pined for her own folks and, when he saw it was inevitable, Gen. Clay yielded gracefully, dowering her with some of the precious heirlooms of the Clay family and giving her a house. The girl, in turn, having married Riley Brock, a youth of her own station and age, named her first born Clay Brock.

And now her little day of fame is ended. Death has closed the most unusual romance of the old Blue Grass state. Fists is written. Gen. Clay was all but forgotten prior to 1903 when his marriage to the slip of a girl brought once more into prominence the hero of a departed age. Now he will recede into history.

The events growing out of that marriage, the beleaguered state of his house, the opposition of his children, the sensations that developed were taken to Atlantic City, where there is a chance that he may live a few weeks longer. He was taken to the White House in an ambulance and was brought into the blue room on a cot, where the president and Mrs. Wilson greeted him. The president made the boy happy by presenting him with a bouquet of forget-me-nots.

DYING BOY'S WISH GRANTED

Washington Youth, With Incurable Heart Trouble, Sees President Wilson at White House.

Washington.—A nine-year-old boy, dying of heart trouble, was brought to the White House to have his desire to see and be smiled upon by the president of the United States granted. He is Harry Winthrop Davis, son of Mrs. A. L. Davis of Sewickley, Pa. The boy had incurable heart trouble for years, and is now being but recurrences of the old time hellacious nature of the man who fought with pen or bowie knife or tongue with equal facility. It was because he was a fighting man that the marriage with the child wife and the reluctance to be interviewed on the subject attracted attention.

Those were the days when faithful servants of the old aristocrat guarded every approach to White Hall, the manor house of his estate at Richmond, Ky., with loaded guns; when the house itself was in a state of siege, guns bristling from its windows and sentries keeping incessant watch.

That impatient curiosity of the public regarding his private affairs irritated the old fighter. The bitterness that arose between the doughty old general and his kinsfolk following his strange marriage aroused his animosity. He did not hesitate to fire on a couple of deputies who approached to serve a writ demanding furniture which belonged to his daughters. His Spartan spirit did not hesitate even to threaten to fire at his own son, when the latter would have made peace. He was of an implacable nature.

He was a fighting man born and bred and he did a fighting man, denying entrance to a physician, with his trusty bowie knife near his pillow and his guns within reach. The body of the old man might decay; his spirit nothing could quench.

A flood of memories comes with the mention of the death of the child wife of this fighting Kentuckian, memories that are now beginning to hardened into formal history with the passing from the stage of the men who recall the day when the name Clay was a name to conjure with. In the halls of congress, in the secret chambers of diplomacy, on the battlefields of the country a Clay has ever made his influence felt. Ever since the country has been a country there has been a Clay to figure in its history. If there were no controversy to take part in a Clay would start one. And now the last of the family is gone—the last fighting member, for of the descendants of the general there has been none yet to break into print with hellacious threat-slings.

To the old general it made little difference whether the fight were with drawn pens, with revolvers, broadswords, flint or guns. But perhaps he liked best the bowie knife. That was a Kentucky defense. Old Colonel Bowie had devised it. The long, keen blade, a certain weapon in the hands of a strong man, it was the common thing among those who resorted to brute strength. No story of hunter or outlaw was complete in the old Nick Carter days without the bowie knife. It is obsolete now, but it was the weapon General Clay knew; when his fingers gripped its hilt his own valor did the rest. He once stood off a dozen men in a hand-to-hand conflict, ripping them to ribbons with his bowie knife and a bowie knife it was that he kept near him as long as breath remained in his body, in that last warm fight with death.

A fight was natural for General Clay. He got his title for leading troops in the Mexican war. He used to say that no man could get political preference in Kentucky without a military title and that he went to war with that purpose in view. His Mexican campaigning days he endured with distinction.

His main fights, however, were in connection with slavery. He was one of the few southern abolitionists. To what fortuitous circumstance we owe it that he went to Yale college to complete the studies he had begun in Transylvania college does not appear. But he went. And when in New England he was deeply moved by the speeches of that prophet of abolition, William Lloyd Garrison. Champion of an unpopular cause, Garrison became a hero to young Clay. It may have been because the great abolitionist was with bravery putting up a losing fight that the Kentuckian admired him.

At all events when he went back among his Kentucky slave holding friends he went back as an ardent abolitionist. Fearless espousal of that cause lost him the re-election to the state legislature in 1841. In '44 he stumped the North with all the impetuosity of his fiery nature for the election of his father's cousin, Henry Clay, to the presidency.

In a harried building, more resembling an arsenal than a printing office, in the city of Lexington on Kentucky's slave soil he issued in 1845 The True American, openly advocating anti-slavery.

And all but forgotten was he, had it not been for his strange marriage and his child wife, whose passing the other day revived memories.

DECLARES DOGS SEE SPIRITS

Miss Lind Also Believes That All Animals Have Souls—Comes to Fight Vivisection.

New York.—"You've got to stop kicking my dog around."

The lady is here to make you stop. Miss Louise Lind of Ilfracombe, champion of the anti-vivisectionists, of world-wide fame, arrived on the Lusitania from Liverpool. Miss Lind says that she is far from being opposed to science, but she is violently opposed to cutting up live dogs and other animals for the benefit of science. She says that it is not necessary. Some years ago she had erected in London a monument to "The Little Brown Dog," the victim of vivisection.

College students tore down the monument and a few riots followed. But the champion of the little brown dog says that the monument served its purpose in directing attention to the sacrifice of live animals to science.

Miss Lind says that it was a visit to the Pasteur Institute in Paris which originated the crusade in aid of the dog and other animals subjected to torture for science. She is on her way to Washington to attend the International Anti-vivisection and Animal Protection Congress.

The friend of the canine is interested in a number of women's movements. She is a suffragette but does not believe in militancy, she says. Militancy, she believes, is as bad as vivisection. In its way.

Miss Lind is also a student of psychic research. She was a friend of the late William T. Stead, who went down on the Titanic. She believes that dogs and other animals have immortal souls as well as human beings.

"It is just as reasonable," said the lady, "to admit that animals have immortal souls as that we have. I believe that dogs may see spirits. We often see exhibits of a high order of intelligence in animals. How often have you observed a dog lying at your side suddenly rise, with his hair bristling and a strange look in his eyes? He sees something which you cannot see."

BEAUTIFUL MAID MARY

By HARMONY WELLS.

Mary Perkins did not answer the advertisement for a maid out of a spirit of adventure. On the contrary, she was in absolute need of employment in order to make both ends of her financial life meet. The embroidery she did was not remunerative enough to pay expenses and Mary had no further business training.

The young author who had advertised had pondered long and deeply before putting forth his need in the newspapers, yet there was no alternative. He must have some one to look after his home and he was old-fashioned enough to feel that a woman and not a man should do it.

When he answered Mary Perkins' ring at the door he had ever hoped it would be an applicant waiting there.

The girl standing outside was slight. Her hair was neatly brushed back and her eyes looked curiously large through the thick-lensed glasses she wore. Her skin was of a dull, almost Indian hue.

"I have come in answer to your advertisement for a maid," she said, and Mary opened the door.

His writing den was nearest to the entrance, and thither he led Mary Perkins.

"All that is essential for me is," he said to her, "that you can keep house intelligently—and quietly." He looked at the girl in so helpless a way that Mary was tempted to laugh. "If you could manage in half a day I would much prefer your holding reins only from ten o'clock until after my dinner in the middle of the day."

"That will suit me," Mary replied. The arrangement delighted her, because it left her afterwards free to continue her embroidery and thus add to her income.

"Have you had your breakfast as yet?" she questioned, taking the reins within her capable hands.

"I was fasting a story," he said by way of answer.

Mary rose to her feet.

"If you show me my way about the house I will prepare something for you."

And from the very beginning Mary took complete possession of Everly's establishment.

So excellent was Mary's cooking that Everly ventured to suggest one of the dreams of his author's mind. Always, since the beginning of his literary career he had wanted to have editors and publishers dining at his own table.

"That is," thought Everly, "it is easy if Mary will stay and serve dinner." He went forthwith to the door and called her.

When she stood beside him, Everly found his eyes opening a trifle wider than was usual with them. Mary seemed so different, so altogether different from the girl she had been. It took him a moment or so to realize that the thick-lensed glasses had been discarded; that the skin was curiously fair and the hair wonderfully riotous.

"You called me, sir?" Mary suggested.

"I called the old Mary. What have you done to yourself?"

The girl blushed and became suddenly abashed.

"I grew tired of looking so plain," she admitted. "When I applied for the position I was very much in need and I felt certain you would not engage me as a maid if—" she broke off with downcast eyes.

"I most certainly would not!" said Everly with conviction. He sighed a second later and Mary asserted her rights as a successful domestic.

"My fingers have not lost their cunning with the culinary art just because I am less homely than you thought me. I can serve as good a meal and keep your house as clean as I ever did, so why may I not be myself?"

"I am perfectly well aware of all these facts," Everly admitted, "but that does not alter the fact that you are far too lovely, too altogether beautiful to—" he broke off and smiled at the humor of the situation.

"Too beautiful to what?" asked Mary.

"Well—the fact is," admitted Everly, "that it has been the dream of my life to have a home to which I can invite my friends. I wanted, next Saturday night, to give a small dinner party to six men, that is—providing you would have been willing to arrange everything for me."

"And why may I not? I can stay all day Saturday and I will plan and serve a dinner that will make the editors accept every story you send them."

"And have them all vying with each other for your attention when they see you—no, thanks." Because Everly was completely mystified as to his own sudden emotions and quite unable to cope with the situation he turned to his typewriter. That movement had always been Mary's cue to exit.

It was scarcely five minutes before he heard her soft knock on his study door. When she came in he laughed aloud, partly from relief and partly because of his new emotion.

Mary's skin was dark, her heavy glasses were in place and her hair was severely drawn back.

"How many covers shall I arrange for—for the dinner party, sir?" she questioned.

Everly jumped to his feet, took the glasses from her eyes, dragged the plumed tendrils of soft gold hair from their captivity and laughed whimsically down into Mary's flushed face.

"I have thought of the only possible way to keep you," he said breathlessly, for things had happened rather suddenly, "you understand—do you not, dear?"

A moment later Mary looked up. "But the dinner—I want to serve that."

"I have told you the one condition under which you can preside," Everly said firmly; "either you are here as my wife or not at all. I would have to get a strange girl if you—"

"If I let you—which I will not," Mary whispered softly. (Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

President Wilson Says No War Exists As Yet—What Will the Harvest Be?

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The Senate today, without debate, passed the volunteer army bill, as agreed to by the conference of the House and Senate. This is one of the essentials before the President can go ahead with any plans for general operations in Mexico. While the President today declared it was not his intention at present of calling for volunteers, it was made apparent that he was providing for every possible contingency. Future steps are dependent upon a more definite announcement of the intentions of General Carranza. Likewise it is declared, the American forces will not extend their operations beyond the vicinity of Vera Cruz until it is clear whether General Huerta will declare war or send troops to attempt to dislodge the American forces. When the troops embarked early today arrive at Vera Cruz there will be more than 10,000 American troops in the Mexican seaport, to hold the city or begin offensive operations toward Mexico City, with Vera Cruz as a base. The American Embassy is reported burned at Mexico City.

EUROPE APPROVES AMERICA'S STAND.
PARIS, April 24.—An agreement between France and England as to what position these countries would take in the event of war between Mexico and the United States is believed to have been reached at a series of conferences held between Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Minister, and Premier Doumergue. In these messages it was specifically stated that Villa would not join with Huerta and the intimation was conveyed that General Carranza by his strong protest against the capture of Vera Cruz was in reality to prevent a disintegration of his forces.

A car on the road is worth any number in the garage. A big reason for Ford popularity is Ford dependability. The Ford is "Johnnie-on-the-spot" three hundred and sixty-five days a year. It gives unequalled service to its owner.

Five hundred dollars is the price of the Ford runabout; the touring car is five fifty; electric self-starter and electric lights $100 extra—f. o. b. Detroit, complete with equipment. Get catalog and particulars from Central Garage Co., 112-114-116 Market street, Maysville, Ky.

New York, April 24.—There are 102,022 male Mexicans over 21 years of age in the United States, according to the Census Bureau.
